

Computer-Based Public Education Technology Award

The Computer-Based Public Education Technology Award recognizes and honors an application that clearly exemplifies an outstanding instructional or informational use of a computer for the general public.

CRITERIA

Items that applicant should address in the submission include:

Purpose

- Uses information technology in a manner that furthers professional goals, purposes, concerns, and issues such as leadership, scholarship, research, image, humanity, thinking, or decision making.
- Enhances, supports, or mimics the scientific, humanitarian, and intellectual pursuits of the nursing profession and is operational in generating outcomes or products that are of benefit to the health of the public.

Operational

- Explains how and why it is not yet fully operational if pilot project. Includes time table for completion.

Usefulness/Impact

- Identifies skill level needed by the audience. If there are prerequisites, either technical or subject knowledge, state these.

Nursing Involvement

- Has had significant leadership and involvement of nurses throughout the development of the application including design, selection, development, implementation, and evaluation.
- Costs of development and source(s) of funding.

Overall Quality

- Describes any noteworthy aspects that the committee should know that are not delineated above including, but not limited to, how this program/Web site has value beyond one institution, and how it furthers the mission and goals of the Honor Society of Nursing.

Items the judges evaluate when viewing entry include:

Purpose

- Communicates content in a manner that clearly demonstrates that these purposes have been met.

Operational

- Is bug free (e.g., all items work); is easy to navigate. If it requires installation, it installs and uninstalls easily. If on the Web, it is easily located.
